Message from the Dean

Dear Friends of HUSD,

With this issue, we welcome the return of The Divinity Magazine, published by Howard University School of Divinity (HUSD). Our redesigned publication renews the School of Divinity’s commitment to providing our alumni, friends and neighbors with news and information on some of the many exciting experiences and activities that continue to shape HUSD.

Much has transpired since our last publication. Dr. Gay L. Byron has been appointed associate dean for Academic Affairs and professor of New Testament and Early Christianity. She joins Clarett McDaniel, assistant dean for Student Affairs, on the HUSD administrative leadership team. Dr. Zainab Alwani and Dr. Jay-Paul Hinds are the most recent professors to join our full-time faculty, serving as assistant professor of Islamic Studies and assistant professor of Pastoral Care, Practical Theology and Psychology of Religion, respectively. Dr. Velma Love is serving as project director and visiting scholar for our Lilly Endowment-funded, three-year, national research project, “Equipping the Saints: Promising Practices in Black Congregational Life.” Additionally, Sharolyn Rosier joins the School of Divinity as our grants associate.

We are also making great strides operationally. The School of Divinity website has been redesigned, and we are enjoying a growing following on Facebook. Technological upgrades and additions are widespread throughout Mays Hall, and Honor Hall has been refreshed as well. The HUSD Sodexo-to-Go Café is now open for business daily on the lower level. Lastly, and perhaps most exciting, is the news that the School of Divinity has been accredited through 2022 by the Association of Theological Schools/Commission on Accreditation.

This year, our annual Alumni Convocation and Alumni Lecture Series served as catalysts for the return of many alumni and friends to the East Campus. It was a great opportunity to renew our collective vision for the future of HUSD.

Luke 12:48 tells us that “to whom much has been given, much is required.” Certainly our thanks are due to our many faithful supporters, including the readers of these pages.

In the Presence,

Alton B. Pollard, III, Ph.D.

Contents
This issue represents a resurrection of The Divinity Magazine, on hiatus since our Spring 2011 issue. This new, enhanced version of the magazine includes a new design and several exciting new features, including an interactive, online version at www.divinity.howard.edu.

The theme for this issue is Community. HUSD is focused on not only engaging our students and seminarians through various programs, but also using our legacy of service to engage the surrounding community. New and exciting opportunities for growth and development exist such as the Lilly Grant-funded program, the Theological School Initiative to Address Economic Issues Facing Future Ministers, which extends training and preparation beyond a student’s time at HUSD and into their future as alumni and community leaders.

Each semester, as we continue to feature highlights from the School of Divinity and the accomplishments of faculty, staff, students and alumni, we know that these landmark achievements were made through a combination of passion for academic excellence and commitment to the power of truth in ministry. After nearly a century and a half, we’ve still only scratched the surface and will continue to help change the world.

New students were officially welcomed to the community in and given their Howard pins, continuing an HUSD tradition, during this special chapel service.

2014 OPENING CONVOCATION
Students, faculty, alumni and esteemed guests joined together for the School of Divinity’s Opening Convocation ceremony. The convocation was led by Dean Alton B. Pollard, III, with assistance from faculty, staff and students. The main message was delivered by Dr. Gay L. Byron, associate dean for Academic Affairs and professor of New Testament. The theme for her lecture was “The Dignity of Difference.”

LILLY ENDOWMENT GIFTS HUSD WITH $250,000 GRANT
Lilly Endowment, Inc., has awarded HUSD a $250,000 grant to support the school’s effort to improve the economic well-being of future ministers. The grant comes as part of a $12.3 million award given to 51 theological schools across the U.S.

To help address the effects of rising debt levels of seminary graduates, the Lilly Endowment created the Theological School Initiative to Address Economic Issues Facing Future Ministers. The initiative’s aim is to encourage theological schools to study and enhance their financial and educational practices.

“We are honored to receive this funding from the Lilly Endowment,” said HUSD Dean Alton B. Pollard, III. “The funds will be used to examine and strengthen our financial and educational practices which address professional financial stewardship as well as sound theologically-informed education.”

HUSD will create programs with the goal of improving the financial literacy of future religious leaders, with a particular focus on reducing student loan debt. In addition, students will be empowered with the “Each One Teach One” curriculum training model to be implemented within their respective communities of faith as well as the larger community.

HUSD REPRESENTED AT AAR/SBL ANNUAL MEETING
Howard University was well represented when the American Academy of Religion (AAR) and Society of Biblical Literature (SBL) held its annual meeting in Baltimore. The AAR/SBL is the world’s largest gathering of scholars interested in the study of religion.

Howard University School of Divinity students had the opportunity to attend academic sessions, workshops, meetings and organizational receptions. There were over 1,000 academic sessions offered by the AAR, SBL and other related scholarly organizations.

Four HUSD faculty members were featured panelists and presenters: Dr. Gay Byron, associate dean of students;
Dr. Nyasha Junior, HUSD assistant professor of Hebrew Bible/Old Testament; Dr. Michael Newheart, HUSD professor of New Testament Studies, and Dr. Cheryl Sanders, HUSD professor of Christian Ethics, presented information on topics such as “Wanted Dead or Alive: A Black Theology of Renewal” and “Biblical Bases and Engagements.”

The annual meeting offered unparalleled opportunities to engage with leading scholars within the field of religion, including research leaders, professors of religious studies and theological seminary and institution presidents.

DEAN APPOINTED TO PRESIDENTIAL ADVISORY COUNCIL ON HIV/AIDS

At the beginning of the academic year, Alton B. Pollard, III, Ph.D., School of Divinity dean and professor of Religion and Culture, was appointed to the U.S. Presidential Advisory Council on HIV/AIDS (PACHA).

Appointed by Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius, PACHA provides information and recommendations to the president on domestic and global HIV/AIDS policy issues. It also furthers the policy goals of the White House Office of National AIDS Policy (ONAP), providing input for the National HIV/AIDS Strategy.

Dean Pollard is one of 24 council members who are drawn from a diverse group of researchers, service providers and community leaders from around the country, including persons living with HIV. The council also includes members from community-based organizations that cater to the medical, legal or mental health needs of people living with HIV/AIDS. Dean Pollard’s research focuses on the intersection of faith and health in communities of color. His extensive background in this field, including his work with organizations such as the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Balm in Gilead and the Metropolitan Interdenominational Church Technical Assistance Network to develop more comprehensive approaches by the faith community to combat HIV/AIDS, makes him an excellent choice for this council. Dean Pollard also served as co-chair of Howard University’s host committee for the Global Interfaith AIDS Pre-Conference in 2012.

The federal government estimates that one million individuals are living with HIV in the United States, and a new HIV infection occurs every nine-and-a-half minutes in America. Globally, there are over 33 million people living with HIV, while AIDS remains a leading cause of death worldwide.
Board of Visitors

After an absence of more than a decade, the Howard University School of Divinity Board of Visitors was reconstituted on March 27, 2012. The HUSD Board of Visitors provides the school with long-term programmatic and operational consultation and, as appropriate, assists with resource and capacity building.

The Howard University Cabinet and the Board of Trustees approve nominees submitted by the administration of the School of Divinity. Each board member is an expert representing diverse backgrounds and interests consistent with the mission and vision of the School of Divinity. Member affiliations range from the corporate world and civic organizations to higher education and church judicatories. One-third of the board’s members are HUSD alumni.

The board is comprised of 14 members and is chaired by Howard University Trustee Leslie D. Hale, Esq. The Board of Visitors meets twice annually to consult with HUSD leadership. Committees of the board are linked to the overall objectives of HUSD, focusing on marketing, recruitment, academics, fundraising and advocacy.

The fall meeting is typically held prior to HUSD’s Annual Alumni Convocation, and a second meeting takes place in the spring. The newly-appointed Board of Visitors held its most recent meeting in February 2014. A report of findings and recommendations from each meeting is provided to the dean and forwarded to the president and Board of Trustees. Appointees to the Board of Visitors generally serve three-year terms.

Two-thirds of the way through his Master of Divinity studies at Howard University School of Divinity, Anthony J. Brownlow decided to enter Howard University’s unique dual Master of Divinity/Master of Business Administration (M.Div./M.B.A.) program. Brownlow is the first and only student enrolled in the program, which was established for the 2012-2013 academic year. By combining the two disciplines, Brownlow will be able to earn both degrees in four years, as opposed to the five years it would take him to complete the two programs separately.
Brownlow states that he was inspired by Dr. D.H. Kortright Davis, professor of Theology and Brownlow’s academic advisor, to take advantage of this new opportunity.

“Dr. Davis told me that the rigors of the M.B.A. program would actually help me see the scripture in a different light,” said Brownlow. “I think he was saying that it would stretch me, and he was right.”

Applicants to the dual M.Div./M.B.A. program must meet all admissions requirements for both the Master of Divinity degree and the Master of Business Administration degree in order to be enrolled. The four-year program begins with two years of core courses at the School of Divinity, followed by three semesters at the School of Business to complete the M.B.A. curriculum. Students complete the dual degree program with the final year of M.Div. studies.

Brownlow’s decision to enroll in the dual program was also based on a sense of responsibility. “I know of instances where individuals have been in a position of leadership and didn’t want to admit that they didn’t possess the business skill set. Then, years later, they find themselves in trouble financially,” he said. “I didn’t want to be in a position of leadership and not be informed.”

Brownlow was pleased to note that his fellow students in the School of Business were quite similar to the students in the School of Divinity. “The School of Business family is close-knit, just like those in the School of Divinity,” said Brownlow. “We are a family. We understand the stresses of studying, and we help one another.”

As a minister at Alfred Street Baptist Church in Alexandria, Va., Brownlow appreciates having the support of both the University and his church, which he views as maternal figures in his life. “I’m having a wonderful experience thanks to the support of these two mothers,” he said. Though he initially sought to be involved in higher education, inspired by late scholar, activist and former HUSD Dean and Morehouse College president, Benjamin Mays, he now hopes to continue to operate between both the education and religious fields.

Overall, the experience has been a humbling one for Brownlow. “Sometimes it just doesn’t register that I am the first in this program,” he said. “To be at an institution like Howard and be able to say you are the first at anything is profound. It is very humbling.”

HOLIDAY COMMUNITY SERVICE PROJECT
In January, the Howard University School of Divinity Student Government Association joined the Howard University Graduate Student Assembly for the 2014 Martin Luther King, Jr., Holiday Weekend Community Service Project at Calvin Coolidge Senior High School.

Service projects included painting new murals and accents for the school, improving light construction, organization, kit-making and workshops for local youth.

HUSD STUDENTS VOLUNTEER AT D.C. CENTRAL KITCHEN
During the fall semester, the Student Government Association (SGA) volunteered and provided support to the staff of D.C. Central Kitchen who prepare and serve the more than 5,000 meals it distributes each day. The outreach efforts were coordinated by the vice president of SGA outreach, Angela Jones, 3rd Year Master of Divinity candidate. The SGA will continue to organize opportunities for students to assist in community outreach in the coming months.

THE FREDERICK G. SAMPSON PREACHING SERIES
When considering the history of HUSD, one must mention Dr. Frederick G. Sampson (A.B. ’50) and his rich legacy of social justice. For over 30 years, he served as pastor of the historic Tabernacle Missionary Baptist Church in Detroit, impacting the world through his prophetic preaching. The SGA seeks to enshrine Dr. Sampson’s legacy by honoring his life and ministry. For the months of January and February, the SGA featured weekly sermons presented by third-year seminarians, which highlighted principles of social justice. The series, held in the Howard Thurman Chapel, gave students a chance to strengthen their homiletical gifts while studying Dr. Sampson’s manuscripts, preparation techniques and the dominant themes of social responsibility and Christian hope.

The School of Divinity is continuously exploring ways to showcase the current, cutting-edge research and scholarship of its faculty while exposing its students to the best of scholarly exchange, dialogue and activism. In line with this goal, the HUSD Faculty-Student Colloquia Series was launched during the spring 2013 semester. Dr. Renee K. Harrison, assistant professor of African-American and U.S. Religious History, initiated the series.

In speaking of her motivation for the creation of the colloquium, Harrison stated that she wanted “to provide a forum for the Divinity faculty to present their work and to be recognized publicly for their ongoing research.” Most importantly, Harrison indicated that the series “offers mentorship opportunities between faculty and students and also provides a model outside the classroom for students to engage scholarship practically, by helping them apply what they learn.”

Since each session is free and open to the public, the colloquium also has the added benefit of providing a venue for both faculty and students to engage in discourse with entities and persons outside the HUSD community.

The inaugural colloquium took place on Monday, Feb. 11, 2013. The first speaker, Dr. Frederick Ware, associate professor of Theology, lectured on the topic, “Democracy and Beloved Community: The Role and Future of the Black Church in American Pluralist Society.” The student respondent, Kamilah Bywaters, 2013-14 HUSD SGA president, was followed by U.S. Congressman Robert C. “Bobby” Scott of Virginia and HUSD alumni, Rev. Kevin Slayton, religious affairs advisor to the Mayor of Baltimore.

The second colloquium featured the newest addition to the Divinity School faculty, Dr. Jay-Paul Hinds, assistant professor of Pastoral Care, Practical Theology and Psychology of Religion. Dr. Hinds lectured on the topic “Shame and Its Sons: Black Men, Fatherhood, and Filicide.” Kyra Brown, former HUSD SGA vice president and graduating student, was the featured student respondent, followed by faculty respondents, Dr. Ronald Hopson, associate professor of Pastoral Care and HU associate professor, and Dr. Ayanna Watkins-Northern, director of the University Counseling Center.

The third colloquium featured Dr. Zainab Alwani, assistant professor of Islamic Studies. Dr. Alwani delivered a lecture on the topic “The Timeless Message of the Qur’an: Its Relevancy Today.” The student respondent for this session was Michael Bell, graduating MA(RS) student, and he was followed by faculty respondents, Dr. Gay L. Byron, associate dean of Academic Affairs and professor of New Testament, and Dr. Sulayman S. Nyang, professor and chair of the African Studies Department at Howard. Dr. Alice Bellis served as this year’s moderator.
Two HUSD faculty members were lauded by the Samuel DeWitt Proctor Conference for their accomplishments and commitment to social justice. Dr. Delores Carpenter and Dr. Cain Hope Felder were recipients of the “Beautiful Are The Feet Award” at the Samuel DeWitt Proctor Conference (SDPC) in 2012 and 2013, respectively. The SDPC focuses its work on education, advocacy and activism, promoting justice by resourcing and organizing partner churches, clergy and lay leaders to address the diverse concerns of communities.

Dr. Carpenter has served as professor of Religious Education at HUSD since 1999. She is also pastor emeritus of Michigan Park Christian Church in Washington, D.C., where she has provided more than 25 years of service. She is a world-renowned preacher, teacher and lecturer. Her writing credits are extensive, covering issues from Christian education to women in ministry to preaching to Africa. Dr. Carpenter is the editor of the “African American Heritage Hymnal.” Dr. Carpenter earned the Ed.D. in 1986 from Rutgers University; M.A. in 1972 from Washington University; and the M.Div. cum laude in 1969 from Howard University School of Divinity, the first female to receive the degree from the School. Dr. Carpenter was awarded the “Beautiful Are The Feet” honor because of her academic acumen and her commitment to social justice.

Dr. Felder has been on the HUSD faculty since 1981. His educational background is extensive: Ph.D., M. Phil., Columbia University in Biblical Languages and Literature; Diploma of Theology, Oxford University, England; M.Div., Union Theological Seminary, New York; B.A. in Philosophy and Classics, Howard University; and Diploma, Boston Latin School.

Dr. Felder is the founder of the Biblical Institute of Social Change (BISC), organized in Washington, D.C. in the Spring of 1990 to inform, inspire, affirm and transform the Christian community through scholarship and research. Dr. Felder was awarded the “Beautiful Are The Feet” honor because of his monumental impact on the field of Biblical Studies in terms of African-American Hermeneutics and his dedication to social justice.
As we consider the exciting possibilities that lie ahead in 2014, HUSD Office of Development continues to make strides toward the goal of increased giving from our distinguished alumni. HUSD continues to provide a quality education to students and serve as a beacon for the church and the community. As director of development, my goal is to help you to restore, reconnect, revitalize and re-establish a mutually beneficial relationship through giving to your alma mater.

Because of the generous support we have received a number of faithful and steadfast donors, we were recently able to endow eight scholarships to assist HUSD students. However, there is much more to be done. There are many areas still in need of support within the School of Divinity, including the proposed Ph.D. program, recruitment activities, student affairs initiatives and additional student scholarships.

The Development Office’s priority for the 2014-15 academic year is to raise $1 million in endowed funds. In addition to traditional fundraising events such as the annual Pillar of Faith Awards program, the Hampton Ministers’ Conference reception, quarterly alumni solicitations and HUSD “Support Sunday” at local churches, we have already received a commitment from the United Church of Christ to raise $750,000. This partnership will go a long way towards accomplishing our lofty goal.

In order to continue to sustain the School of Divinity’s mission “to educate, form and empower leaders to serve the church and the world,” it is imperative that all alumni lend their support by sowing seeds into a harvest that will pay huge dividends for those coming behind us. Your donation, regardless of size, translates into an economic transaction that involves social change and a tangible return on your investment that the School of Divinity will continue to engage in the pursuit of excellence in ministry.

Thank you for your support!
